

My family listens to K-LOVE radio every day – the local translator provides an important part of our family’s daily routine. It’s programming is consistent with the values that we feel are important. In addition, the music is contemporary and compelling. If this station is replaced by a LPFM broadcaster, it will remove the primary source of contemporary Christian music from the local airwaves, which we (and many others) would view as a significant loss to the community. I believe our local radio translator provides a terrific, uplifting service to our community by providing a positive and encouraging message for those of us who chose to listen. I encourage the FCC to not let LPFM stations replace K-LOVE’s translators throughout our area, and in fact throughout the country.
